

Contemporary Models for Aging: Where and How We Live

Sunday, April 26, 2015 • 7:30pm

Follen Community Church • Community Center
755 Massachusetts Avenue, Lexington, MA

Whether you are newly retired or quite elderly and need nursing care, chances are good that you have considered choices – or wished you had more choices – about how and where to live. In recent years, there has been a growing recognition that we can and must do a better job of affording elders an opportunity to have both autonomy and community as well as access to a range of services. This panel discussion will provide an overview of some of the newer thinking about housing options for seniors, with specific examples of new models. Come share your questions and, perhaps, your own experiences with housing models and nursing care for seniors.

PANELISTS

Paula von Kleydorff, Program Director, Carleton-Willard at Home in Bedford, MA, using the "Beacon Hill Village" model

Judy Mastrocola, Leonard Florence Center for Living, a nursing home operating on the "Green House" model in Chelsea, MA

Carol Agate, Resident, Cornerstone Village CoHousing

RESPONDENT

Ruven Liebhaber, an architect experienced with the elder cohousing development process, assisted living and hospice facility projects, as well as elder advocacy
